A PRISON IN MEXICO.

CURIOUS CUSTOMS THAT PREVAIL IN BELEM JAIL.

Musical Instruments in the Cells and a Concert Almost Every Evening by the Prisoners—Dinner Hour Marked by a Curious Spectacle.

Among the various uses to which Mexico has put some of her old monasteries and convents is that of serving for the incarceration of violators of the law. The Convento de Belem at Mexico City has become, in common parlance, Belem, the city jail and prison, and is a place where men, women and children alike being confined there in different compartments. The building was put up by the Spanish governor in 1686, as an inscription at the head of the main stairway tells. A casual visit paid it by a reporter of The Mexican Herald reveals a condition of prison management in Mexico worthy of passing attention in the days of prison reform associations and international prison congresses.

The Herald said that Belem had been commonly spoken of as a second Black Hole of Calcutta, but the reporter found that the prison was kept in a state of comparative cleanliness; not so, however, the prisoners. Their condition he described as one of disgusting filthiness. Although there was a hygienic in every cell and general bathing facilities in each compartment, the reporter found only one inmate either at bath or with any indication of having bathed within a year. It was explained to him by the prison authorities that formerly the regulations required prisoners to bathe daily, but that this was regarded as such a hardship that the prisoners managed to have it declared a form of cruel and unusual punishment and so to have the rule abrogated. There are in the prison now 3,451 prisoners, of whom 2,933 are men and 518 are women.

A curious feature found by the reporter was the Spanish regard for the arts, even within prison walls. He found in the south wing the writers of libel, "and the cells reserved for musicians, artists and others of the fine arts." It would seem to be a charitable as well as an inclusive provision, that "and others" (besides artists) of the fine arts. The musicians are permitted, apparently, to take their instruments to jail with them, much as mechanics take into the prison workshop their own tools of trade. "The walls of the musicians' cells are decorated with different musical instruments, and the reporter was told that almost every evening there was a concert in one of the patios."

Men sometimes do in Mexico what in this colder clime they content themselves with wishing done, for the reporter came upon one Adams, under sentence of 20 years "for killing a waiter at the Club de la Opera because he did not bring his dinner quick enough." Adams has the freedom of his galley. There are in each galley three trustees who go about with clubs and preserve order, using the club "only when moral suasion will not do as well."

There were stories among the 57 men condemned to death. One of these, under sentence for assassinating a man, expressed his serene confidence as to his future. But, "if worst comes to worst"—a shrug of the shoulders and palms up. This man and some others under death sentence had the run of the commandant's offices, notwithstanding there were on the walls, serving as decorations, confiscated weapons of prisoners. Oddly enough, as it would seem in this country, though it wouldn't have been strange in the Italy of Machiavelli, there wasn't a gun among these. The nearest to it was a bayonet, and the rest were poignards, scimitars, stilettos, butcher knives, table knives, penknives, and shavers' knives.

The dinner hour was marked by a curious spectacle. The street outside the prison was filled with the "wives, children, dogs and other members of the prisoners' households." These brought baskets of edibles to the prisoners, some of whom were permitted to speak to their relatives through a grating. To the convicts not permitted to come to the grating, in notes accompanying the dinner baskets. This privilege had given rise to a peculiar way of making a few pennies among persons able to write—"Itinerary" scribbles who for a cent or two wrote messages to the prisoners. "One woman bade the scribe to put her message in red ink. She would have none of the 'purple stuff.'"

"Tell him," said she, "that I send him two little tamales and tell him that the perrita died yesterday."

Says the reporter, "And the scribe, leaning under the shade of his umbrella, sitting on a rock, with his bottle of red ink on another rock beside him, worked away assiduously, with an etymology all his own, beginning paragraphs with lower case letters and putting in caps in the most unexpected places, so that it would take an Ignatius Donnelly cryptogram to decipher the meaning of his hieroglyphics."

The Shilling Trick.

A wandering sleight of hand man was entertaining some loungers with an exhibition of his tricks. After showing a good number of them, he said: "But I have one good trick that I call the shilling trick." Of course they all wanted to see that, so he instructed a good number of them to give him a shilling, after having marked it and carefully noted the date. About a dozen of the bystanders did so, and he took them all, shook them up, and then showed each man another shilling than the one he had marked, accompanying each shilling with the question: "Is that yours?" Each man, of course, said "No," and he strolled away, saying: "Then they must all be mine."—London Globe.

Figures Scribbled by a Schoolboy Finally Brought Fortune.

"My brother William, who died a few years ago," said Colonel Andrew Freeman the other night, "from his boyhood days had a curious habit of scribbling on every piece of blank paper he picked up."

"When he was first able to form figures with a pen or pencil, he would trace the meaningless number '13,174' on everything that had a blank space of sufficient size. On the whitewashed walls of the little old red schoolhouse down in my home county in the Pennsylvania that boy wrote '13,174' ten thousand times or more."

"On the fly leaf of his textbooks, on the margins of the newspapers my father was a subscriber for, on the envelopes and on the unused bits of papers in all of the letters that came to our house he traced those figures in every idle moment without being able to tell why he did so. My father gave the lad some pretty severe thrashings and countless reprimands for indulging in the senseless habit, but Will never stopped it for a day."

"When I was 27 and Will was 32, I told him one day that I was going to play the numbers he was so devoted to in the Louisiana lottery and if I drew anything I would divide up with him. I had been throwing away a dollar in the gift enterprise for five or six years and had never drawn a cent. I didn't get the number I wanted that month, but the next month I got two tenth tickets, number 13,174, and I struck the $10,000 capital prize. Will got one-half of the cash, and till the day of his death, eight years ago, never quit talking about the luck his hobby brought me. It was the most remarkable incident in my life and the most notable occurrence in the history of our family."—Louisville Post.

The Price of Liberty.

The white-headed old dorky approached one of the northern congressmen at the foot of the capitol steps, removed his hat and said: "Ize cum all de way f'm Nottoway county, cap'n, to see what yo' kin do far me. I paid $2,700 for my liberty, en ain' heard nuthin f'm de promises o' de gabberment."

"You mean to say, uncle, that you bought your liberty?" the congressman asked in surprise, thinking to humor the old man.

"It's a fac', cap'n, en twenty-seven hundred wuz de price."

"I thought eternal vigilance was the price of liberty, uncle?"

Scratching his head for an understanding, the ex-slave replied doubtfully, "Waal, cap'n, dat must be de case wid de white folks, but de poor nigger has ter pay cash."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

He Had Traveled.

"Now," said the intrepid explorer after he had shown the natives the inside workings of the brass watch and had noted his naive wonder at the mysteries of the mechanism, "I will let you have one of these for two weeks. Then you can be the envy of the tribe."

The native gentleman yawned. Then he said: "I exchanged a secondhand war club for a bushel of those things when I was in London last summer, and there was not one of them that went for more than a week."—Pearson's Weekly.

SCHOOL MONIES AND STATE LANDS.

The State officers have purchased United States 4 per cent bonds of the par value of $45,000 for the State School fund. These bonds cost $49,944.63, including expressage on money. They mature in 1937 and the interest on the investment will net the school fund about 2 1/4 per cent per annum, which, it must be admitted, is a very low rate of interest in Nevada.

The money paid for these bonds was derived from the sale of State lands. The State charges an individual who wants a quarter, half, or whole section of State lands 6 per cent per annum and invests the money in bonds which net the school fund only 2 1/4 per cent per annum.

To illustrate the operations of the law governing the sale of State lands and the investment of the money derived from the sale of such lands, let us suppose that two men want to purchase a section of land each. One of the men is rich and pays the full price—$1.25 per acre—at the time of the purchase. This money is invested in United States bonds, which net the school fund 2 1/4 per cent per annum interest. The other man is poor and can pay only one-fifth of the price of the land down, that is twenty-five cents per acre. The State holds the land as security for the payment of one dollar per acre, and charges the poor man 6 per cent interest per annum on the deferred payment.

As the school moneys derived from the sale of State lands can only be invested in two classes of securities—State and United States bonds—and the borrowing power of the State under the constitution is nearly exhausted, so that investments henceforth must be confined exclusively to United States bonds, would it not be advisable for the incoming Legislature to reduce the interest on deferred payments on State lands? For some reason School officers have hitherto opposed a reduction of interest on deferred land payments, but if they give the subject serious consideration they will doubtless come to the conclusion that such a reduction would increase the school fund. The more land contracted for the better for the schools, and much land that has been forfeited to the State by reason of the high rate of interest would be again applied for if the interest was reduced. If full payment is made for lands, the money brings the school fund only 2 1/4 per cent per annum; if the lands are contracted for, the school fund gets 6 per cent per annum on the deferred payment, and it is only reasonable to suppose that if the interest was reduced more lands would be taken up and the school fund increased thereby.

This is a question of interest to the State and those who aspire to seats in the Legislature should give the subject attention that they may be prepared to speak advisedly if a change in the laws should be proposed.

THE SECRET OF SCHLEY'S POPULARITY.

Commodore Schley, who commanded the American fleet when it achieved such a brilliant victory at Santiago de Cuba, is idolized by his men. It is told that when he was an Ensign on board a war vessel on which Sampson was a Lieutenant, the latter had the ship's druggist administer a large dose of opium to a poor marine whom he accused of stealing a banana. When Schley, who was ashore at the time, returned to the vessel he saw the marine lying in agony, and asked Sampson the cause. Upon being informed he said: "No gentleman would do that," and followed up the remark by slapping Sampson's face. Sampson demanded satisfaction, but Schley reminded him that it was against the regulations for naval officers to send or receive challenges to fight a duel, but added, "That need not prevent you from getting satisfaction, sir. We can both resign and fight it out." Sampson did not resign nor seek satisfaction. After Schley's victory over Cervera, a message of congratulation was signalled to the Brooklyn, Schley's flagship, on behalf of a great newspaper. The men on the Brooklyn went wild with enthusiasm and cheered themselves hoarse for Schley. Then the Commodore spoke up and said: "Thank you, boys, but I didn't do it; you are the boys who did. Let the officers cheer the crew."

Commodore Schley gave credit for the victory of Santiago to those whom it belongs. The brave men, who manned the guns and directed their aim with deadly accuracy at Cervera's fleet, which comprised the best ships in the Spanish navy. Of course he is young.

For with his story, because he has the feelings of a man, and gives credit where credit is due.

KOOH'S DICTUM.

For more than a year Professor Kooch has been trying to pluck out the heart of the mystery of malaria. The eminent bacteriologist is so far advanced in his study that he feels able to lay down two principles of great interest:

1. Where there are no mosquitoes there is no malaria. Where there are mosquitoes there is malaria.
2. Quinine, the supposed sovereign remedy, must be taken in just the right quantities at just the right period of the disease, or it sets up a fever more dangerous than malaria itself.—N. Y. World.

The opinion is rapidly gaining ground that the war is nearly at an end. Spain as a matter of course, will grasp at anything that offers, to keep up an appearance that the honor of its Government has been sustained and recognized although suffering defeat. The terms of peace can only be one-sided under the circumstances and they will be dictated by the United States.

The report of General Shafter showing that there are 3,770 cases of sickness in the army in Cuba, has given the officials of the War Department considerable concern.

Secretary Alger has given orders for the removal of all of General Shafter's army as soon as the men, in the discretion of the commanding officer, may be brought safely back to a camp on Montauk Point, Long Island.

It is said that the Signal Corps will be recruited up to sixty men and that Capt. George B. Ackerman of Winnemucca will receive the appointment of Captain.

There seems to be a scarcity of water all through the West. Even the coast towns, which seldom suffer from this inconvenience, are restricting the use of water on lawns or for sprinkling purposes.

ART LEADERS.

The Porteous Decorative Company a Progressive Firm.

A person cannot help but stop and look at the splendid display of Art in the Porteous Decorative Co's window.

The display is equal to that of similar firms in large cities, the goods being the very latest in details of frame, mounts, etc. The variety comprises medallions, water colored photos, colored chromos, panels, views, and in fact everything in this particular line.

In addition they have elegant bevelled mirrors, paper mache center pieces and frames of every description. They are also agents for enlarged crayon and water color portraits from photographs and can take and fill an order to the perfect satisfaction of the most exacting customer.

In the decorative line their stock of wall paper, shades, etc, is complete and they can decorate a room to suit most any taste or whim in this particular art. They carry in stock many novelties in the art line and can procure anything on short notice that they do not happen to have on their shelves.

A complete stock of paints, oils and window glass is a specialty of the firm and they can fill an order in this line from a lump of putty to painting a whole town red. Among the late contracts filled in the decorative line are the stores of Messrs Herz and Pliniger, Kohler & Mercklinger's tontorial parlors and the Monarch saloon, all of which are artistic and attractive, comparing with any similar work on the coast.

The prices of the Decorative company in all things are moderate and within the reach of all.

Albert M. Lowers of Washington, D. C. Sends Word of Captain Ducat.

Albert Lowers of the Patent Office at Washington, D. C., has forwarded a letter received by him from the Adjutant General's office relating to Captain Ducat. He thought the letter would be of interest to the many Reno friends of the Captain, hence forwarded it. Here it is:

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, July 19, 1893.

Mr. Albert Lowers, Patent Office, Washington, D. C. Sir:—Your letter of the 18th instant is received. In reply thereto I have to inform you that Captain A. C. Ducat, 24th Infantry, is reported on the official list received from General Shafter, as having received a gunshot wound of both thighs. The report does not state but he is supposed not to be dangerously injured. Captain Ducat is now in hospital at Fort Tampa, Florida, where he arrived recently on board the U. S. steamship Cherokee. A communication addressed to him at that point would probably reach him.

"Very respectfully," "H. C. CORBIN, Adjutant General."

Later dispatches state that Captain Ducat has so far recovered from his wounds as to be able to start for Salt Lake City, and is probably on his way there now. This will be good news to his friends here, for he held a warm place in the hearts of nearly all of Reno.

Much Ado About Nothing.

The acting editor of the JOURNAL does not court any prominence, but his shoulders are broad enough to bear any criticism of anything he writes and censure for the same if deserving of it. Neither of the proprietors of the JOURNAL have in any instance instructed him as yet in any way touching what should or should not be said regarding prospective candidates. The Virginia Report's persistent claims that E. D. K. they wrote or approved the Cutting notice published in the JOURNAL a few days ago, after that gentleman has fairly stated that he never saw the notice, nor did he have any knowledge of it, also after the acting editor stated through the paper that Mr. Kelley had nothing to do with the notice whatever, are simply ridiculous. The language of the notice was in line with the notice of Prof. Bray's candidacy, also that of Prof. Winfrey and not included as an endorsement of Mr. Cutting nor either of the other gentlemen at this time. It is unfair to blame Mr. Kelley with the shortcomings of the acting editor of this paper and it may be well to add right here for the information of some other people as well as the Report editor that if any one has any kicks coming, the acting editor is big enough and perfectly capable of receiving them personally.

The Small Matter to be Noticed by the Magnates.

The officers of the Southern Pacific inspected the passenger depot here yesterday, but it is not likely that any of them wanted a drink of water or they would have discovered that the water tank or cooler was conspicuous by its absence and that such a thing would be a great boon to mothers who are compelled to travel with little children, when the latter are nearly famished for a drink of water and none can be had within half a block and then only at a saloon.

HEROINES OF THE RED CROSS

March Who are the Gaidon of Duty is Set to Battle With Wounds.

We praise the officers who direct our battles; we praise the sturdy heroes who in field and on shipboard fight the battles; we have praise for the living and tears for the dead, but what of the devotion of the men and women who, under the sacred Red Cross, have enlisted, and who now are sick and ailing of a scourge more fatal than the bullets of the battlefield?

There are no flags to cheer them; no martial music; no anthems of the guns to thrill them on and make them forget their danger; their duties in health are most exacting; in sickness there is no comfort for them save that they march to where the guinea of duty had been set, and there make battle against the wounds and disease until they, too, are prostrated. They are the heroes without note; they are the veterans that no pension can reward.—Salt Lake Tribune.

CONDENSED WAR NEWS.

Dispatches from Madrid say: The King's attack of measles is running its normal course and as there are no complications his highness will doubtless be sufficiently recovered to eat pickles in a few days.

The Americans who have visited Manila from the warships say the town is as badly built as it can possibly be. The houses are built as close together as possible and the streets are so narrow that disease is easily and almost certainly epidemic. The city has a quarter of a million of inhabitants, a rich and prosperous mart and a center of education and luxury. As the buildings in the walled city indicate, it is disreputable, ill arranged and unsightly. It excites the people allege that earthquakes and typhoons, thunder storms and floods are the reason for not having a passably presentable town.

The War Department yesterday morning received a dispatch from General Brooks, at Newport News, dated last night. He stated that he was aboard a transport and would sail for Porto Rico early this morning.

The newspapers at Madrid consider the peace terms attributed to President McKinley as acceptable to Spain. They include no indemnity and Spanish sovereignty in the Philippines is to be respected.

The papers, however, protest against the continuation of hostilities after Spain has sued for peace.

It can be stated on the authority of the State Department at Washington that there were no overtures in behalf of Spain until the French Ambassador called on the President last Tuesday. Therefore all the talk about bad faith on the part of the Government in pushing the Porto Rican expedition is absolutely without foundation.

Truth and Fiction.

"Strawwelpeter," one of the pictures, represents a little maiden, supine in bed, very ill—and no wonder—with an immense cherry tree growing out of her mouth. This was the sad result of swallowing the stones along with the fruit, in spite of all warnings. But we all know that truth is stranger than fiction, and the Petersburgskaya Gazeta of June 26 and July 8, 1897, quotes the following exemplification of this saying from the foreign papers:

"A little girl 7 years of age, Amelia L., whose father worked at the sawmills in Belgard (Ain), was at play the other day, when she managed to push the seed of a plane tree deep into her ear. Shortly after she began to experience acute pains, and it was found that the seed had taken root in the waxey secretions of the ear and was growing apace. The father proceeded to cautiously uproot the intrusive plant, and the girl has now recovered."

If this story is true, it is to be hoped that Miss Amelia L., now that her ear is once more free and in working order, will incline to hearken to the exhortations of her elders and will not go on planting plane trees in such obviously unpropitious soil.—Notes and Queries.

Position in Society.

To all those who spend their time wondering how other people live we would suggest that an examination of the plaintiff's petition in the case of Schneider versus Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 98, might throw some light on the subject. It was a suit under a civil damage act, and the plaintiff alleged in her petition that she "was the wife of one Zimri Hosier, on whose good conduct, frugality and personal labor she was dependent for the support of herself and their seven minor children, for the proper culture and moral training of the latter, and to a good extent, for her own position in society." The said Zimri Hosier, when not intoxicated or laboring under the effects of intoxication, was an industrious laboring man and regularly earned and received for his labor $1.50 a day. There's management for you. Seven children and a wife supported, the children properly cultured and morally trained and the wife's position in society maintained—all on $1.50 a day. Perhaps there may have been extenuating circumstances in the information of Zimri.—Law Notes.

Two Firms and the Difference in the Strain That Comes Upon Them.
The rudder of a wooden ship is composed of the stalk and the backing, which are so joined together as to form in effect a single piece. The complete rudder is coppered, to protect it from worms, and then, besides being practically all in one piece, it has that appearance also.
The stalk is the part to which are attached the pintles, or pivots, by which the rudder is suspended and held in place, these going through eyes set in the ship's sternpost. The stalk runs up through the stern of the ship, and to its head is bolted a cap to which are attached the ropes by means of which the rudder is controlled. The backing is the blade part of the rudder.
By far the greater strain comes on the stalk, and the greatest strain of all comes on the head of the stalk, the rudder head, where it is held. The stalk is made of the wood most likely to stand the strain, carefully selected, sound, well seasoned oak, while the backing is made of spruce or hard pine. The stalk is of a single, solid, massive piece, stout as an oak tree and indeed of the dimensions of a small oak, something that a man can pin his faith to, if he can have faith in any wood, while the backing or blade is, like many modern wooden masts, built up. It would be difficult if not impossible to find trees that would yield planks big enough for the purpose in a single piece, and the built up backing, made of pieces of selected wood, can easily be made of ample strength to withstand any strain that will be brought upon it.
As to the stalk, stout and solid as the oak may be, the head and may be twisted by the force of a tremendous blow from a wave upon the rudder, or under the repeated strains of long use, the head may split, and so make the stalk useless. Then the rudder is taken out and fitted with a new stalk. A suitable stock is selected and worked down to the proper size and form, and very probably the old backing is attached to it. The life of a rudder stalk would probably be 12 to 14 years. The backing might last as long as the ship.
